The sky's the limit with the Cloud

Jun 01, 2012 | By: Kidela Capital Group (/author/Admin) | Comments

(<http://www.kidela.com/wp-content/uploads/2012/03/synaptop.jpg>) By now, most of us know what Cloud computing is even if we have not yet tried it.

The Cloud allows us to use a wide range of computer programs without having to load these programs onto our hardware. The Cloud is essentially a shared resource that can be accessed over the internet by computers anywhere to carry out numerous activities.

This means of computing is cheaper to use than traditional methods, and its potential is virtually limitless.

The Cloud has been touted as being the way forward in how we work, and one company that's already making use of its potential is Synaptop. Synaptop's founder and CEO, Sami Siddique, spoke exclusively to Kidela. He began by describing what Synaptop is all about.

"Synaptop is a virtual computer on the Cloud. It's an operating system that runs on top of the internet. It's a place where you can manage all your data, apps, and relationships. You can share your files with your friends, and you can send large files. You can access Synaptop from any device," Siddique explained.

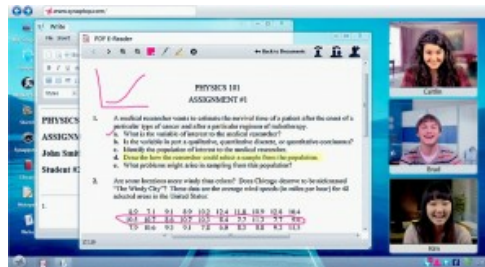

Great news, but Synaptop actually goes one step further than just file sharing.

"The best part about Synaptop is that you can collaborate with friends in any app. So you can do things like watch movies together, listen to music together, you can edit and update documents together, and you can reach out to multiple friends," Siddique elaborated.

Synaptop is a boon for all social networkers, but its potential as a business tool is clearly far-reaching.
